Tickets Still Available For BYU Play Tonight

Seats are still available for Thursday's performance of "Online," presented by Brigham Young University's drama department, according to the ticket information desk.

Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. In the Joseph Smith auditorium, the play runs through Saturday night.

Cast in the leading role of Undine, the sea-nymph who falls in love with a human, is Helen Smith. Playing opposite her as the human Hitter Hans is Ron Paulson.

Highlight of this story of the unhappy love match is the play's climax which is one of the most haunting farewell scenes in dramatic literature, according to Lael J. Woodbury, director.

Undine's story is unfolded before a full setting painted in light pastel colors and finished in a flat poetic atmosphere.

The rest of the story unfolds to the accompaniment of the most technical production ever attempted at BYU.

Sixty sound cues, spirits slipping through walls and a water fountian with rising and lowering water, share the spotlight with Undine and Hans' love affair.

It will be followed by an 18-minute color film, "This is the Place," which shows the 1947 auto trek made by the Sons of Utah Pioneers over the route originally taken from Nauvoo, Ill., to the Rocky Mountains.

Toscanini Dies After Long, Bright Career

NEW YORK, (OE) — Worldfamed conductor Arturo Toscanini, the greatest maestro of his time, died in his sleep Wednesday at his home in the Riverdale section of New York City.

He would have been 90 years of March 25

His son, Walter, said Toscanini felt no pain and died without knowing the end was near. Death came at 8:40 a.m.

At his bedside were the maestro's two daughters, Wally, the Countess of Castelbarco of Milan, and Wanda, the wife of noted pianist Vladimir Horowitz.

Toscanini suffered a stroke Jan. 1 after attending a New Year's party, and never recovered.

Except for his family and closest friends, Toscanini saw few persons in his last years and lived in virtual seclusion. He considered his personal life his own, and rarely gave interviews even in his active heyday.

The white-maned conductor whose vigor and memory remained unbelievably strong almost to the last, retired as conductor of the National Broadcasting Company's symphony of the air three years ago. His appearances since then had been few.

His musical greatness flowed over the world for 68 years, beginning with an unexpected and tremendous triumph at the age of 19 and continuing until his retirement in 1954

15 Honored By Nominations For Snarf, Worthal, Louise

Petitions for Worthal, Louise Lush and Professor Snarf candidates are being circulated on campus and by noon Wednesday 15 aspirants were nominated for the honorary titles.

Voting for the personalities will take place at the studentbody assembly Jan 25 Final results will be announced at the Daily Universe-sponsored Bibler Bounce the following evening

Petitions are now available at the Daily Universe office and must be returned by noon Monday.

Forty names and a fifty-word-or-less reason telling why the person nominated is especially suited for the honorary title must accompany each petition.

Among those nominated for Professor Snarf honors is Albert Swenson, associate professor of chemistry. Swensen has met his Waterloo, according to petitioners

"We have taken his hard-classroom tactics, his passion for unbelievable amounts of homework, his ruthless closed book and closed mind test, his unexcelled version of humor, long-enough," state signers of the petition.

"They continued, "With one title we can repay him for all he his done—not for us, but to us He is well deserving to be called Professor Snarf."

Florence Christie was the first nominee for Louise Lush. Reasons listed on her petition were "She fits the prototype of Louise Lush exactly. She is a curvy, mantrapping (you name him—she's met him) type coed who spends as little time as possible in classes (but still her professors pass her).

Eligibles Rename Group Utilizing 3 Languages

by Dan Gashler

BACHELORS, the most eligible organized ones on the Brigham Young University campus, have decided that they should have a respectable name. So they now have one—Chi Sigma XXV.

The men of this exclusive organization (formerly BOTMAA —Bachelors Over Twenty-Five Mutual Assistance Association) got together early in the Autumn Quarter after a suggestion for a such a group appeared in the Daily Universe.

At the first meeting 30 interested "oldsters" joined together, elected officers, started working on a constitution, and planned a party for the following weekend. Don Nelson was elected president, Bob Crist, vice president, Phil Koldweyn, secretary, and Dave Dalton social chairman.

THE NAME of the organization remained BOTMAA for several weeks, then a committee was assigned to study the languages and get a dignified sounding name. Gordon Taylor headed this group.

Latin was most usable language Taylor found. His proposal at the next meeting was: Senes Juvenes Caelibes Sperandi, which is freely translated "The hopeful unmarried oldboys," or literally old youth unmarried hopefuls."

THIS COMBINATION of words sounded dignified, but was not as easy to write as BOTMAA; so further changes were needed.

After considerable discussion, it was decided that the words Chi and Sigma should be used at least in meaning if not in fact. Someone suggested changing the first letters to Greek, C to Chi and S to Sigma, and adding the Roman equivalent to 25.

So BOTMAA became Caelibes Sperandi which in turn became Chi Sigma XXV.

All eligible bachelors are invited to the open house for this organization Thursday night in 349 McKay building.

Frantic Farmers Face Foxy Felines Friday

by Jerry Cunningham

Utah State's pugnacious "giant killers" will muster all strength at their disposal hoping to topple Brigham Young University from the Skyline lead Friday night in Logan.

Perennially powerful at home, the Farmers would like nothing better than to dowse BYU in the fifth straight time they did Utah who are co-favorites with the Cougars to win the crown.

But Coach Stan Watts and his Brighams have learned by experience that the Logan house court is a precarious one, especially for the "big wings" of the conference.

Watts, a master strategist, counts on the element the Aggies upset fever with a surprise, fiery-eyed offense. The coach has run his charges through intensive closed-scrimmage drills.

One Cougar task will be to stop the prolific scoring of Smith, Farmer who is averaging better than 20 points a game. Skyline sharpshooter while shooting from the field at upwards of 50 per cent and from the line at 65 per cent.

On the Utah State side of the coin, Cecil Baker's outfit have a task in stopping the scoring of the Cougars which is distributed among Steinke, John Benson, Ron Bowe and Harry Anderson.

In 14 games, 9 wins and 5 losses, Steinke, the amazing shooter, has been the most consistent scorer of the Cougars, averaging 30.6 points a game.

Benson, 6-4 forward with a good and rebounding ability has been up and down in scoring race, averaging 16 points a game. Forward Bowe and Anderson, swift guard, have averaged around the nine point game.

Aside from the awesome home court advantage, the Brighams bowl favorites to trip the pesky Aggies Voted 16th in the nation in two major polls, the Farmers are one of country's better teams in the State. St. John and UCLA, nation's fifth ranked team.

Utah Historical Course Slated As Night Class

"Utah and the Westward Movement," a class concerning the colonization of this state will be offered as a non-credit course through the Extension Division of Brigham Young University.

Beginning Jan 23, the class will be held every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in 346 McKay Building. The course will last eight weeks with different professors giving the lectures.

Lectures will include Gustave Larson on "Utah Before the Utah War" and "Utah and the Civil War" and Jay Hunt will conclude the series with "Colonization from Utah."

Registration may be complet ed before the course begins at the BYU Extension Services office, or at the first class meeting.

Well, back to watering elephants.

FROM THE SPORTS DESK

by Ray Tracy

With everyone left wondering what happened to a supposedly fourth-rate basketball team, the Cougars of Brigham Young University have literally pulled themselves up by their shoe laces to the number one position in the Skyline Conference.

The Cats, under the brilliant coaching of Stan Watts, have steadily improved as a team. This perhaps spells the difference between a losing and a winning ball club. Many teams develop in such a way as to produce a so-called star, a one man show. When he's "on" they win, when he's "off," they lose. This year the Cougars were a TEAM, with four of the five starters almost always hitting in the double figures.

In final analysis the "team" will win out over the "star."

Certainly much credit for the Cougar success lies in the fact that the team members are trying their best every game, all game, and at an intra-squad practice. But it is easily observed that many of the Cougar games this season were won from the coach's bench.

Take for instance the game at Wyoming:

A nine point advantage the Cougars held at half time was gobbled up by Wyoming. BYU barely led by a slim four point margin as the game went into the fourth quarter. This was a real threat on Wyoming's part as they outclassed BYU on rebounds, and outshot the Brighams from the field.

Time out was called, with about eight minutes left in the game.

When the Cougars resumed play, they suddenly were found slowing down the fast break tactics they had used during the the Cougars waited for lay-ups, where they either scored or were fouled three quarters. Now it was a type of "ball control" in which fouled.

In this manner the Cougars literally won the game on foul pitches, hitting a phenomenal 84 per cent from the free throw line, 18 hits out of 18 tries in the second half.

Of course many other factors besides coaching must be taken into consideration when evaluating the Cougar success this season.

For one thing, Harry Anderson has held two high scoring guards down by his watch dog defensive tactics Not only that, but he is now beginning to hit a little, and must be guarded every second lest he dart in for a lay-up.

With Tom Steinke bombing them in from outside, Anderson driving for lay-ups, John Benson and Lynn Roe pumping them in up close, the Cougars are a team to watch in the top twenty, and perhaps in the top ten.
